It is probable that the pulp factory will have to soon shut down for want of spruce timber. Nearly all the timber that was piled at the factory last winter has been used, besides a large amount that was brought by rail. A small amount of spruce is being brought to the factory now by wagons, but not much can be expected until sleighing comes.

We believe the notion that allowing cows, etc., to run at large in this city, is a benefit to poor people in general, is erroneous, and that most of the persons who have cows run at large, are in good circumstances. It has the effect to cause a poor man who owns a lot, to be obliged to build a costly fence. The nuisance of cows running at large in this city should be ended.

The weather continues remarkably mild and pleasant. The river is free from ice except in the booms, and there is no ice on the bay. There is no snow on the ground, and more agreeable weather for December could not be manufactured. In fact the weather is milder, and there is less snow and ice than there was several weeks ago. It is phenomenal weather and just suits the people here.

About 3,000,000 feet of the logs were brought by railway, from their camp on the Mud Lake branch.

Patrick Moloney was brought to the Red Cross hospital last Saturday, having been frightfully burned in the face and hands. In company with another man he was on his way to a lumber camp back of Black River, and Friday night, they stopped at an old log shanty that was deserted. They kindled a fire and went to sleep. While thus sleeping the shanty caught on fire and was full of fire inside when they woke up. The flames were rushing out of the door, which served as a chimney. Moloney made a rush through the flames in the door way and got outside, but was horribly burned. His companion noticed that the flames issuing out of the door did not extend to the ground, so he crawled out under the flames, and escaped uninjured.

S. P. Wires brought 20 cases of white fish eggs, last Saturday, from the fisheries on the north shore of Lake Michigan, and added to what was already in the hatchery, not only a surplus stocked the hatchery, but left a surplus amount. At the fish hatchery now there are over 300 jars of white fish spawn, holding about 50,000,000 eggs. On Monday, four cases of the surplus eggs were shipped by rail to the Northville hatchery, where they will be kept a short time, and then, with a large number of white fish eggs at that place, will be reshipped to the U. S. hatchery at Duluth to be hatched out. Mr. Wires and his men have been very successful this year in gathering eggs, and not only stocked the hatchery here but will furnish many millions of eggs to other hatcheries. The Northville hatchery is devoted this winter mostly to raising trout.
